

April 2022: GLOBAL MARKET INDEX PERFORMANCE

Global equities posted negative returns in April with the MSCI ACWI IMI down -7.9%, the S&P 500 down -8.7%, and non-US developed equity markets down -6.5% in dollar terms. Value stocks outperformed growth stocks for the month, and large cap stocks outperformed small cap. U.S. investment-grade bonds decreased -3.8% for the month and U.S. high yield was down -4.9% as interest rates rose sharply. Commodities increased 4.1% and the all-items CPI was up by 1.2%.

Equities and bonds experienced a hard month in April as concerns over the Russia/Ukraine conflict and rising inflation hinder investor sentiment. The US Congress passed a spending bill to fund the federal government through September which, combined with last December's $2.5 trillion increase in the debt ceiling, eliminates the imminent risk of a fiscal crisis. Yields are surging and consumer spending lessening in leu of higher inflation. The US dollar continues to strengthen as monetary policy tightening continues.
